ANCIENT INDIAN LITERATURE

The oldest known piece of Indian literature is known as the Rig-Veda" which consists of 1028 hymns written in Vedic Sanskrit. Although the majority of the ancient Indian literary works that have survived are religious texts, it is erroneous to characterize ancient Indian literature exclusively In terms of religion.

Indian literature spans a variety of literary forms, including epics, songs, dramatic and didactic poetry, narrative and scientific written as well as oral poetry and music.

Two ancient Indian epics are the Ramayana and the Mahabharata, prior to the Gupta dynasty, a lot of secular literary works were produced. During this time, poetry and drama were in their prime.

The principal topics of these works included political events, allegories, comedies, romances and philosophical issues. In southern India, ancient Indian writings were written in Tamil, Telugu, kannada and malayalam, Four Dravidian languages that also established their own literature and script. The earliest of these, with literature from the first decades of the christian era is Tamil, Three sangams [Meeting of poets and writers] held at separate eras resulted in this development.

Students and professors organised the program at kantilal khinwasara Bed College. Our Guest lecturer was Bhmadhavi kharat.
