Open Source and Free E-Library Resources

Our institution is committed to providing high-quality academic resources and promoting a culture of research and learning among our students and faculty. To enhance academic accessibility, we have integrated several open-source and free e-library resources into our digital library. These resources enable our academic community to access a wide range of scholarly material, ensuring that the latest research, textbooks, and journals are easily available.

The following e-library resources are available for use:

1. Shodhganga: A national repository of Indian theses and dissertations, Shodhganga provides a platform for researchers to deposit their PhD theses and make them available to the academic community. Our students and faculty benefit from access to a vast array of research material.
2. Koha: As an open-source integrated library management system, Koha allows our library to effectively manage and organize its resources. It enhances the borrowing experience for users, enabling easy access to books and other materials in our physical and digital collections.
3. E-ShodhSindhu: This consortium provides access to a large number of scholarly journals and e-books to support research and teaching in higher education. The resource helps in reducing the cost burden on our institution while ensuring access to high-quality academic material.
4. E-Balbharti: Focused on educational content for students at various levels, eBalbharti provides textbooks, supplementary resources, and other materials for learners. This is especially useful for faculty members engaged in teaching foundational courses.

These resources are essential for fostering a robust academic environment in our institution. They not only support the academic growth of our students but also provide our faculty with the tools they need for advanced research and teaching. We continuously explore new open-source and free e-library resources to expand our digital library and remain committed to academic excellence.
